The Grub-ſtreet Journal. NUMB. 404.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1737.

Sept. 10, 1737.

To the Select Society of Grub-ſtreet.

Gentlemen,

A CERTAIN perſon who ſubſcribes himſelf OCCIDIT in your 398th Journal of Auguſt the 11th, has taken the liberty to fall foul on 'a certain order of raw ſcholars called 'Gentlemen-Commoners.' The enormities he there complains of are obvious, and certainly ſtand in need of reformation; but I have more than once heard, that Fools ought not to ſet up for Reformers.

I gueſs the Author to be ſome Batchelor of Arts, who has lately had a quarrel with ſome one of that order, he is ſo inveterate againſt; and to be very much exaſperated, that he can't claim the ſtatutable privilege of precedence. Thus far is only gueſs-work; this I am ſure of, that either pride or ill-nature ſet him upon appearing in print on this occaſion. I myſelf lately had the honour of being one of that Order, which the Author maliciouſly endeavours to undermine; and have often heard the licentiouſneſs of my brethren complained of, and amendments propoſed by men of the beſt ſenſe; ſuch as were willing to retain the primitive dignity of their Alma Mater, and conſulted with one another for proper methods to reduce theſe extravagancies, which had ſo long and ſo much exceeded their limits, into their right channel. But, as their deſign is in this manner pre-divulg'd, I ſuppoſe they will rather chuſe to drop it (tho' very good) than be thought to be led by — I won't ſay what.

How often is a whole ſcheme ruined and overturned by one over-officious ſhallow-brains! when a number of perſons have lay'd their heads together for the ſervice of the publick, one Fool (as there may eaſily be one in a number of men) publiſhes their intent before it be brought to maturity; and withall, repreſents it in ſo diſadvantageous a light, that even when it is brought to perfection, it meets with a very cold reception, if any at all.

He calls us 'thoſe uſurping, idle, ignorant, irregular, 'unſtatutable, undiſciplined ſet of Gentlemen' I own thoſe ſet of Gentlemen is the perfection of the Engliſh language; but I wonder he ſhould allow us to be Gentlemen, after all thoſe ungenteel epithets. Thoſe epithets may be true, if you allow him to ſingle out a particular perſon for each epithet; but ſo untrue in general, that I'll venture boldly to affirm this of, and for my brethren, that there are not three in the whole number of Gentlemen-Commoners throughout Oxford, but what are infinitely ſuperior in ſenſe to the ſcurrilous Mr. OCCIDIT. He may probably excell them in the Sciences; for I very well remember, a fellow of the dulleſt capacity in our whole College, who was eſteemed in the ſchools a very good Diſputant; or, in that ſcience which SENECA mentions, Epiſt. lxxxviii. Circa eadem ferè Pyrrhonii verſantur, & Megarici, & Eretrici, & Academici, qui novam induxerunt Scientiam, NIHIL SCIRE. Polite learning is (in my humble opinion) likely to prove moſt uſeful to a Gentleman; Hiſtory and Oratory will be of more ſervice to him, than Logic, Metaphyſics, Optics, Ethics, Mathematics, &c. ics altogether. Why ſhould He then be obliged to proceed in the ſame path with them, whoſe ſtations in future life will be ſo vaſtly different? But this is foreign to my purpoſe. —— I obſerved before to you an incomparable Angliciſm of Mr. OCCIDIT's, I now preſent you with an inſtance of the inimitable elegance of his ſtile. 'They are alſo allowed in no graduate privileges 'in the Univerſity, tho' they claim the prerogative to ſo 'many in private Colleges; and to our ſhame be it ſpo-'ken, are countenanced in them by thoſe who ought to 'judge righteous judgment, that is, impartially, which 'is to diſtribute diſcipline and privileges equally to all Un-'der-graduates, being agreeable to the intent of our fore-'fathers.' Here follows a quotation which the Author took from his Latin Syntax; for, tho' very inclinable to favour him, I cannot perſuade myſelf he underſtands HORACE.

I ſhould not have ſelected this paragraph, had I not preſumed that few would give themſelves the trouble of reading the whole: but if any perſon ſhould have that curioſity, I aſſure him, that he will meet with the ſame propriety of diction in every part; yet, I hope he will not be prejudiced by what I have ſay'd, but (to uſe the Author's own expreſſion) judge righteous judgement.

He ſays this moreover, 'I ſhall take an opportunity of 'writing on other ſubjects to you, as particularly very 'ſhortly [this looks like part of TOM BROWN's adver-'bial Declamation] againſt conferring of honorary degrees 'on Gentlemen-Commoners, which the Univerſity is 'very much incenſed at.' Mr. OCCIDIT has ſo learnedly, eloquently, &c. ly, &c. ly, handled his preſent ſubject, that it would be as great an injury to the learned world, ſhould he now ſtop his pen-graſping hand, as it would have been to the miſerable part of mankind, had the renown'd DON QUIXOT, deaf to the moving cries of the diſtreſſed, inhumanly withheld his wrong-avenging arm from inflicting juſtice on the common diſturbers of human ſociety.

I gueſs at his ſcope in what he promiſes ſoon, of which I ſhall take no notice, if he take my friendly advice to make a full ſtop where he is, and reflect that he has gone too far already; otherwiſe,

Cave; Cave; namque in malos aſperrimus
Parata tollo cornua.

Which that he may underſtand, I have thus tranſlated.

Beware, my Brethren, how you ſcorn,
Or dread the fury of my horn;
Which always threatens inſtant fight
To ev'ry foul-mouth'd Scribler's ſpite.

Gentlemen,

Your conſtant reader,

T.

P. S. I beg, Gentlemen, this may be inſerted as ſoon as Poſſible, for ſeveral very particular reaſons; and you will lay an infinite obligation on

Your humble ſervant.

Gentlemen,

AS the following calculations relating to the preſent Lottery differ, in ſome meaſure, from any which have yet been layed before the publick, the inſerting them in your Journal, may poſſibly tend to prevent ſome of your readers from being impoſed on by falſe appearances, which is the ſole diſintereſted view of

Your humble ſervant,

D. M.

In order to place the Lottery in a true light, 'twill be proper firſt to premiſe, that the ſame conſiſts of 70,000 tickets, at 3 l. 11 s. only per ticket (for the 6 l. 9 s. is no ways concerned, but only ſo much money ſent the Bank to perplex the cauſe) and hence will be eaſily ſeen what the money played for amounts to, viz.

70,000 tickets at 3 l. 11 s. amount to	248,500	money riſqued,
from which deducting	98,000	to build the Bridge, &c.
there remains	150,500	money play'd for.

This is indiſputably the true ſtate of the caſe, ſince, if the tickets had been iſſued out at 3 l. 11 s. each, without advancing the ſuperfluous ſum of 6 l. 9 s. every Proprietor would have gained exactly the ſame by a Prize, as he will according to the eſtabliſhed Scheme; for tho' each Prize would have been 6 l. 9 s. leſs, the tickets coſting 6 l. 9 s. leſs, would render the gain equal, and indeed 6 l. 9 s. of the money returned for every Prize, is no part of the Prize, becauſe every ticket is entitled thereto.—The next thing which offers, is to compute what 98,000 l. deducted from 248,500 l. amounts to per cent. — Anſwer, — 39 l. 8 s. 8 d. — And hence I would take occaſion to obſerve, that 39 l. 8 s. 8 d. per cent. deducted from the money riſqued, is no leſs than 78 l. 17 s. 4 d per cent. odds againſt the Adventurers; or, in other words, 'tis playing 100 l. againſt 21 l. 2 s. 8 d. The following plain example will fully illuſtrate this aſſertion. —— Suppoſe 2 perſons, A and B, ſtake 100 l. each, and agree that 39 l. 8 s. 8 d. per cent. be deducted from the money riſqued, there will then remain only 121 l. 2 s. 8 d. that they play for — conſequently each riſques the loſs of 100 l. to gain 21 l. 2 s. 8 d. which are ſuch odds as were never before heard of; but amazing as they appear, every Proprietor in the Lottery engages on the ſame diſadvantageous terms.

Great Prizes generally tend to dazzle the eyes of mankind to ſuch a degree, that they either can not, or will not, perceive at what odd they play againſt themſelves. The beſt method therefore to bring this Lottery to a more ſteady light, is to conſider 150,500 l. the money in all played for, as one Prize, and 248,500 l. ſtaked by 2 perſons for the chance of this Prize; in ſuch caſe, each of them riſques the loſs of 124,250 l. to gain 26,250 l.

Again, the diſadvantage is clearly ſeen in this other view. If we ſuppoſe the money played for to be divided into 7000 Prizes of equal value, there will then be ſo many Prizes of 21 l. 10 s. each, with 9 Blanks to a Prize, and every Proprietor of 10 tickets, will ſtand exactly the ſame chance to draw 10 Blanks as 2 Prizes; therefore riſques the loſs of 35 l. 10 s. coſt of his 10 tickets, to gain 71 l. 10 s. the neat amount of 2 Prizes after the firſt coſt is deducted. —— This is the real and true ſtate of the odds in the preſent Lottery, which I ſubmit in an eſpecial manner to the conſideration of the Fair Sex (whoſe intereſts call for defence from every man) whom the Projectors of bad Lotteries ſeem to have peculiarly in their eye, flattering themſelves, that they either can not diſcern their impoſitions, or will give into them for the ſake of being (what is ridiculouſly ſtyled) in the way of Fortune. But I have ſo good an opinion of the Ladies underſtandings, as to hope, that they will not be bubbled after this rate out of their money, ſince I am perſwaded, the greateſt Devotees to dear Quadrille, would ſooner burn their cards, than play at the aforeſaid odds of near 5 to 1.

Gentlemen,

SOME while ſince you publiſhed, in your Journal, a Diſcourſe concerning the beſt method of teaching the Latin Language. That Diſcourſe was blamed in that particular, that it encouraged the uſe of LILLY's Grammar. That peremptory condemnation of LILLY objects to me a grievance, which, tho' I can't hope to reform, yet I think proper to obſerve to the publick. LILLY's Grammar is doubtleſs defective in many particulars; yet the queſtion may be, Whether thoſe deficiencies are as detrimental to the inſtruction of youth, as a great licentiouſneſs of teaching a variety of Grammars, according to every maſter's fancy. LILLY has brought up as many ſcholars, as (perhaps) all the reſt of the modern Grammar writers; nay, moſt of thoſe very Grammarians owe their inſtitution to LILLY; and 'tis a certain maxim, what has been, may be. Why then muſt a man be condemned for teaching LILLY's Grammar, which has been, is now, and probably will be, the general Grammar of the nation?

I am not ſo fond of a piece of antiquity, as to think it cannot be equalled by the moderns; neither will I be ſo averſe to it, as to reject it, purely becauſe it is antique. If authority ſhould introduce a more correct Grammar into general uſe, it would doubtleſs be of ſervice: but I muſt be of opinion, that a multiplicity of Grammars is of a worſe conſequence, than all the failures of LILLY. Uniformity is even neceſſary in this caſe, as well as in others: the exigencies of parents affairs, often oblige them to remove their children to different ſchools: and 'tis a great misfortune, that children (on thoſe occaſions) are ſubject to as different methods, as maſters. 'Tis deſervedly eſteemed a valuable article in the education of youth in foreign countries; that, if a parent be neceſſitated to move thro' the whole circuit of France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Flanders, &c. whereſoever he ſhall occaſionally reſide, his child meets with the ſame Grammar and Authors, and conſequently the very ſame Method. Our great ſchools, to be ſure, turn out as good ſcholars, as any nation can glory in: but as it does not ſuit with the conveniency of all people to ſend their children to them, it is to be wiſhed, that the maſters of ſmall ſchools were ſubjected to ſuch reſtraints, as might make them more uniform, and by that render them more ſerviceable to the public. Every man has not foundation enough to form uſeful Methods: and our youth often ſuffers for their ill-grounded fancies and caprice. We have as much learning, as our neighbours; but, in general, worſe teaching: and this is owing, in my opinion, chiefly to the diformity of Method, which reigns in every pariſh, and is unhappily tolerated. There are indeed other cauſes, which may be obſerved hereafter, by,

Gentlemen,

Laſt ſaturday, Tho. Hull, an old Leacher, from Leiceſter, and Rob. Rawlins, a ſoldier, ſtood in the pillory in Wine-ſtreet, purſuant to their ſentence, for ſodomitical practices; but never were two wretches worſe pelted, eſpecially old Hull; who was ſtunn'd ſeveral times, and ſo depriv'd of his ſenſes, that he hung ſome time by the wriſts in the iron hand-cuffs of the pillory; after which the mob pull'd down his breeches, and continued pelting with ſuch fury, that had not the pillory broke down, tumbling them backward over head and heels on the ſtreet, and the magiſtrates with ſome conſtables interven'd, they certainly would have been kill'd on the ſpot. Hull was carry'd away on a man's back to Newgate, where he lay ſpeechleſs, and thought paſt recovery till the monday following. DP. &c.

Married, yeſterday, at Harrow on the Hill, William Newport, Eſq; a near relation of the late Earl of Bradford, to Miſs Lane, an heireſs of 25,000 l. fortune. G.

Yeſterday as they were ſtriking a ſcaffold near Coal harbour in Thames ſtreet, part of it fell upon a paviour and kill'd him. DP. LP.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 21. His royal highneſs the Prince of Wales has purchaſed the leaſe of Sir Rob. Brown's houſe adjoining to the Duke of Norfolk's. LP.

On monday night a meſſenger came to the right hon.

the Lord Mayor, from his royal highneſs the Prince of Wales, to acquaint him, that their royal highneſſes were in readineſs to receive the congratulatory Addreſs of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, upon the birth of the young Princeſs. We hear the Addreſs will be preſented to morrow, and that their royal highneſſes will receive the ſame at Carleton-houſe in Pall Mall. Yeſterday it was notify'd to the Court of Aldermen by the Lord Mayor, when ſome alterations were made in the Addreſs lately drawn up. DA.

Yeſterday her highneſs the Princeſs Auguſta was much better at Kew. DA. G.

The right hon. the Counteſs of Jerſey is appointed one of the Ladies of the bed-chamber to her royal highneſs the Princeſs of Wales. DP.

Laſt week there was a great ſtruggle for Mayor of Oxford, when Tho. Lawrence, Eſq; was choſen by a majority of 100. DP.

Married, laſt week, the rev. Mr. Trent, a hearty rich old widower, near fourſcore, rector of Biddenden in Kent, to Miſs Beale, a young lady of great beauty and ſmall fortune. DP. —— Of great merit and beauty. G. —— Yeſterday, at Weſtminſter-abbey, Will Baker, of Eaſt-ſtreet, Red-lyon ſquare, to Mrs. Bibby, a widow of 10,000 l. fortune. DA. —— A very agreeable young widow. LP.

YORKSHIRE PUFFS. Every Poſt brings a particular account of the vaſt crowds of ſick people who daily reſort, 20 miles round, to Mr. Ward, who at preſent reſides at Gisborough in Yorkſhire; and we hear he performs wonderful cures amongſt them DA. Sept. 16. —— York, Sept. 12. The famous Mr. Ward, that came through York in the race week, in his journey to viſit his relations in the North, before he goes beyond-ſea, went firſt to Scarborough, where he was daily crowded with 4 or 500 people, for his aſſiſtance; and tho' he ſtay'd but a ſmall time, it's wonderful to think the many extraordinary cures he made, and great good he did there; as alſo the ſame at Gisbrough where he was born; and now is daily attended with great numbers, and impatiently expected at York, where it is hop'd by many, that he will call in his return to London. G. Sept. 17. —— The famous Mr. Ward, being very corpulent, ſeems to be puffing off the Stage of Great Britain as faſt as he can; Dr. Taylor, being leaner, went off with more expedition; Mrs. Mapp, tho' of a maſculine ſize, non eſt inventus. Unhappy Britons, to be thus left by your Phyſicians, Oculiſts, and Surgeons, diſeaſed, blind, and lame!

Dear CONUNDRUM,

UPON looking over your Papers, I no where find the ſecond part of our brother SIMON's Ballad, in your 316th Journal, nor ſhall I pretend to queſtion why it does not appear; but if you will accept a remnant to eke it out, and think it may match the Piece well enough, the following is very much at your ſervice.

Dec. 8, 1736. SIMONIDES.

The wedding ſung as hath been ſaid——
'What pleaſures did abound?
No modern Miſs ſuch compaſſed,
'For twice ten thouſand pound!

23.

'O ponder well! my pretty Maids all,
If you would Husbands win;
'Quit Park and Play, and Ring, and Ball,
And ſit at home, and ſpin!

24.

Each PATIENT GRIZEL's ſpinning wheel,
Shall out-turn giddy Fortune's;
To Fops and Fools will leave Quadrille:
Nor Sev'n or Elev'n importunes.

25.

Our Song, a moral and a Wife,
Doth offer everichone;
To gentle lads, a GRIZ, for life,
To Criticks keen a bone——

26.

And all, who would or would not wed,
Ne getten boys and girls,
May learn from this ſaid Marriage-bed,
'Virtue's more worth than pearls.'

We hear from Ireland, that a certain great man has hung a black flag on the ſteeple of St. Patrick's church, and had the bells muffled, which rang this morning in a very diſmal tone, on account, as we hear, of the late reduction of the gold coin. LP. Sept. 20.

We are inform'd by Capt. Playters of the Neptune, arriv'd at Cowes, that coming through the Gulph of Florida, he was met by a Spaniſh man of war, who boarded him, broke open his hatches, and rummag'd the hold, taking away ſeveral things of value; after which they went into the cabbin, and other places, and broke open ſeveral boxes, trunks, &c. in which were apparel, and preſents to people in London, of which they took as much as they liked; as alſo a good many of the ſailors cloaths, and treated them exactly (as the Captain ſays) as if they had been in the hands of a pyrate; after which they let them go. During the time of their being on board they heard, that the ſame ſhip had taken a Brigantine belonging to Briſtol, and a Dutch ſhip. DP. LP. Sept 20.

Capt. Ferra, of the Meridian, bound from Philadelphia to Jamaica, in his paſſage from thence was drove upon the keys on the north ſide of Cuba, by a violent gale of wind, where they loſt their anchors and cables. During the time they lay there, which was a month, the Spaniards plunder'd them of every thing of value. After which ſhe was loſt on an iſland on the Bay Apalucha, about 15 leagues from St. Mark's; but with ſome difficulty they conveyed part of the cargo and ſhip's furniture to the ſaid place; from thence they were carry'd to St. Auguſtine in a Sloop belonging to the King of Spain, that goes there with Proviſions. DA. Sept. 21.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSDAY, Sept. 15. —— Verſailles, Sept. 19. Count de Velois, antient Captain of a man of war, died at Port Louis, aged 66. DP. —— My Brother ſtill keeps to his antient way of tranſlating.

The Lieutenant general de Police at Paris has publiſh'd an Order againſt all unauthoriz'd Societies, and laid a fine upon the maſter of an ordinary, for ſuffering a Lodge of Free Maſons to be held at his houſe. G. DP. —— On the 7th, Solitaire, the famous robber was broke alive upon the wheel, and died with amazing obſtinacy. LP.

According to Letters from Vienna, the news of the action near Bender is confirm'd from ſo many places, that there can be no doubt of it, &c. G.

By a private Letter from Amſterdam we hear, That M. de Dieu, one of the Commiſſaries of the State for the regulation of the Tarif at Antwerp, having taken a tour to report to the States General what had paſſed in the two firſt Conferences which were held there upon this affair, he has told their High Mightineſſes in general, that the Commiſſaries of the Emperor would allow none of the many complaints made in the Aſſembly by thoſe of the Republick, to be of any weight. That moreover, the Commiſſaries of his Imperial Majeſty have ſufficiently given to underſtand, that the propoſitions which they have orders to make, are in themſelves ſo juſt and equitable, as to render them worthy of being accepted without any alteration; and that therefore he had more and more reaſon to expect that this affair would be the occaſion of much contention; or that if it was brought to a determination, it would be ſuch a determination as would be greatly diſadvantageous to the Dutch. DA.

Letters from Genoa of the 4th inſt. bring advice, that the malecontents in Corſica had cut down all the vines and trees about Ajaccio, by way of reprizal upon the Genoeſe. DP. DA. LP.

SATURDAY, Sept. 17. Yeſterday arriv'd a mail from Holland, which brought the following advices. —From Vienna, that the Court appears greatly ſatisfy'd with the diſpatches that have been made by an expreſs from Nimirow, which contain the reſult of the firſt conferences. The Plenipotentiaries of the Ottoman Porte appear ſincerely diſpos'd to promote as much as poſſible the ſucceſs of the negociations: ſo that there is room to hope that a peace will be concluded before the end of the year. One of the principal reaſons that determin'd the Court to defer the ſiege of Widdin, was the fear of ſickneſs prevailing in the army, from the moiſt and thick air which is always found in Bulgaria in the Autumn. There has been great diſputes amongſt the Turkiſh Eccleſiaſticks, whether they ſhould agree to a demand made by the Janiſſaries, of permiſſion to drink wine during the war againſt the Chriſtians: at laſt the Mufti has iſſued a Decree in favour of that demand, to the following effect: 'That leave 'might be given to the troops of the Grand Signior, 'without derogating from the Law of Mahomet, to drink 'wine during the war againſt the Unbelievers, upon condition that a moderate uſe be made of this permiſſion, 'and no more of it drank than what may be neceſſary to 'enable them the better to ſupport the fatigues of the 'Campaign.' A deſign of ſome Raſcians to ſet fire to four ſeveral parts of the city of Niſſa, has been diſcover'd, and ſeveral of the perſons concern'd in it have been arreſted. DA. DP. G.

From Warſaw, that the Couriers that were diſpatch'd from Nimirow to inform themſelves of the truth of the news which was ſpread about of a great action between the Ruſſians and Turks near Bender, and of the reduction of that place, have upon their return reported, that this news was entirely falſe, that the army under the command of Count Munich, was yet at a conſiderable diſtance from Bender, which place, they ſay, is in a good poſture of defence; and that the new Grand Vizir was marching with his whole army to meet the Ruſſians, ſo that news is daily expected of a battle. DA.

From Madrid, that Signior Farinello, the famous Italian ſinger, is arriv'd from England at St. Ildefonſo, where lodgings were prepar'd for him by order of the King. Their Majeſties have been ſo charm'd with his ſinging, that they have deſir'd Mr. Keene to write to London to engage the directors of the Opera to permit him to ſtay the next winter in Spain. DA. —— We hear, that the King of Spain has created him a Knight, and made him Yeoman of the mouth, with a penſion of 18,000 crowns. G.

'As the Abridgment of the Philoſophical Tranſactions has 'been always eſteemed a ſingular Benefit to Literature, 'whereby a vaſt Treaſure of it has been put into the poſſeſ'ſion of many, who otherwiſe could never have had an 'Opportunity of obtaining it; ſo one of the uſefulleſt 'Projects that has ever been executed in favour of Chriſtia'nity, is this Epitome of the Boylean Lectures, which 'muſt be allowed to be a Collection of the nobleſt Apolo'gies for Natural and Revealed Religion that the World 'was at any Time bleſt with. But with all their Excellen'cies it cannot be denied, that they are too voluminous for 'many to read, and of too great a price for many to pur'chaſe; and I may add, ſome of them very difficult to be 'come at. There was ſtill therefore ſomething wanting 'to render them more univerſally ſerviceable, and diffuſe 'the Advantages that may be reaped from them. Nothing 'could be done ſo conducive to this purpoſe, as an Abſtract 'of theſe ineſtimable Diſcourſes; ſuch as this before us, 'where the Argument is ſuffered to retain its entire Force, 'and the Reduction is of thoſe Things only, which, tho' 'they greatly adorn the Subject, contribute little, if any 'Thing to the real Weight of it.'

Scribimus indocti, doctique. HOR.

O Grub-street! how do I bemoan thee,
Whose graceless Children scorn to own thee!
Tho' by their idiom and grimace,
They soon betray their native place.
Yet thou hast greater cause to be
Asham'd of them, than they of thee. SWIFT.
